STAR GROUP SOLUTIONS ACTIVE ASSAILANT TRAINING

This training course provides a comprehensive interactive session incorporating audience engagement, feedback, and discussion of various approaches to active threat responses. Discussion will focus on the current evidence, industry recommendations, and the value of lockdowns versus options-based training for an active threat.

What you can expect to learn:

- What to expect
- When to run and where to go
- How to effectively hide
- When to fight and what with
- What to do when the police arrive
- What your individualized emergency plan should look like

WHY YOU NEED THIS TRAINING

Threats posed by active shooters and the quickness with which active shooter incidents transpire reinforces the importance of preparation. This training was developed to help companies, schools, congregations and other organizations...

- Better understand the threats and risks posed by Active Shooter Scenarios
- Become aware of general preparations and options for responses that broadly apply
- Identify special situations that may merit a deeper dive into specific planning and training

THE INSTRUCTOR

Dan Dluzneski graduated from the Southern Illinois University with a major in Criminal Justice and later went on to attain a second bachelor's degree in History from the University of Maryland.
